LONG CHASE OF A BANK TELLER AND BRIDE ENDS

Edwin St. George Banwell Caught by Pinkerton Man at Kingston. ROBBERED CANADIAN BANK. Eloped with Beautiful Norah Hector from Toronto After Stealing $20,000.

The end of a romance that began when Edwin St. George Banwell, the young teller of the Crown Bank of Canada, in Toronto, eloped with beautiful Norah Hector after stealing more than $20,000 some yesterday when Assistant Superintendent U. E. Duhain, of the New York office of the Pinkertons, arrested Banwell in Kingston, Jamaica.

It was three years ago that young Banwell met Norah Hector, a beautiful Toronto girl, in a exclusive society. They were related to many of the seven families who form the aristocracy of the Dominion. Banwell was then just entering upon his career as a bank employee. From that time his attention to the beautiful girl was known to all their friends. Their marriage was assured, but nobody guessed under what circumstances.

From that time on they paid the penalty for their theft. The first stage of their honeymoon brought them to New York and they were married at the Hotel in West Twenty-third street at several days' passing the time to their elopement. They visited friends and relatives in the city.

They fled once more. Once more they fled. They went to Jacksonville, Fla., and for a week or two they crossed to Havana. From Havana they hurried to Santiago, Cuba, and then to Kingston, Jamaica.

This was the last stage of the chase. Mr. Schanton, young Banwell and his bride, followed on the next steamer. The money that had been stolen from the Toronto office was still in the possession of the bride.

They fled once more. Once more they fled. They went to Jacksonville, Fla., and for a week or two they crossed to Havana. From Havana they hurried to Santiago, Cuba, and then to Kingston, Jamaica.

CLYDE LINER ASHORE ON THE JERSEY COAST

Cherokee, from San Domingo, Stuck on Brigantine Shoal. VESSEL NOT DAMAGED. Life-Saving Crew Reports All Safe on Board—Tug Goes to Her Assistance.

The Clyde liner Cherokee from San Domingo is ashore on Brigantine Shoal, north of Atlantic City, on the Jersey coast. She is reported uninjured and is expected to get off at high tide tonight.

However, she is said to be undamaged and will likely be floated at high tide this evening. News that the vessel had taken no injury was brought back to the shore after the life-savers had made several attempts to reach her, thinking the passengers and crew might be in peril.

A tug of the North American Wrecking Company, passing up the coast was signalled and went to the Cherokee's assistance. There was peril in the possibility of bad weather before the vessel should be freed from the sand reef.

The vessel hit the outer bar near Barnegat inlet at 10 o'clock this morning. There was a heavy fog outside, and a stiff wind blew in from the southwest. The Cherokee was close along the shore when she struck.

As soon as she grounded the steamer began to disintegrate and the South Brigantine life-saving crew repelled and ran out boats. It took twenty minutes to get one of the boats launched. Men were on the boat launched, and the vessel from sight, but through the blankets of mist and fog the life-savers were still looking for the vessel.

Eight men and two children were included in a family party of wealthy New Yorkers, as reported by the South Brigantine crew. The passengers were: Joseph Scheraga, Albert N. Johnson, Louis A. Train, Walter W. Hamilton and Miss M. C. Hamilton. The crew consisted of: Edward Lippold, Ellis Adams, Joe Adams and Anna Adams.

According to Capt. Smith of the life-saving crew, the passengers are badly frightened and many of the women are crying. The captain of the Cherokee wishes, at this time, to have the vessel towed to the Jersey shore.

The straggled vessel has a crew of forty-six men and her cargo is valued at over $100,000. The San Domingo steamer was wrecked five days ago and made good weather until the heavy fog of the settled fog last night.

PRINCIPAL IN TO-NIGHT'S FISTIC BATTLES.

"CORBETT" AND HERRERA LEWIS VS. FITZGERALD

IRISH-AMERICAN A. C. IS OUT FOR WAR ON THE A. A. U.

Will Not Submit to Order to Drop Court Proceedings, and It Will Be a Fight to the End.

Justice Gleason, of the Supreme Court, worked until late this afternoon on his decision in the proceedings brought by the Irish-American Athletic Association against the Amateur Athletic Union. His court-room was crowded with men prominent in athletics who expected the decision and were much disappointed when it was not handed down.

War is the end was declared today by President P. J. Conroy, of the Irish Club, and his attorney, Daniel F. Cahalan, of No. 77 Broadway, who has had charge of the injunction matter. Mr. Cahalan said today: "The motion served on me by the A. A. U. is one of the most remarkable papers I have ever seen. While the decision of Justice Gleason is pending we are commanded to withdraw the proceedings under threat of charges of contempt of court and of being held in contempt of court and of being held in contempt of court."

A. A. U. Puts It Strong. The notice served on Mr. Cahalan read as follows: "At a meeting of the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. Jan. 11, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: 'Resolved, That this committee demand from the Irish-American Athletic Club that they vacate within ten days from Jan. 6 the case of the I. A. A. C. in Joyce and Castleman against the Registration Committee, General Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U., and upon failure to comply with this resolution the committee prefer charges of insubordination against the I. A. A. C. in accordance with the by-laws of the A. A. U.'"

The subject of this is very dear to me," said Mr. Cahalan today. "Since July 5 last James E. Sullivan and the Registration Committee have thrown every possible objection in our way and now they propose to hurt or prevent our midwinter games at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 24."

"That they will not," asserted P. J. Conroy, president of the Irish Club, who dropped in to help plan the campaign. "We have spent $1,000 for the Garden and made all the arrangements for the greater athletic tournament in the history of New York, and we will submit to the atrocious insult and injustice of James E. Sullivan."

The matter came up before Justice Gleason yesterday. He instructed the attorneys to appear in court in ten days, declaring that the papers in his possession were too much at variance with the facts as he knew them to be handed down without a hearing, and that the way will be made clear for the midwinter games.

Real Cause of the War. The present war dates back to July last, when the Registration Committee refused to grant a license to the Irish Club member and John Joyce, the five-mile runner. It has been suggested that the club should be dissolved.

TWO RING BATTLES WILL BE DECIDED ON COAST TO-NIGHT

'Young Corbett' and Herrera in Trim for Bout at Los Angeles and Fitzgerald and Lewis Await the Gong at Colma.

'Young Corbett' is favorite over Aurelio Herrera in the fight to-night at Los Angeles. The betting is at about 7 to 5. In the Fitzgerald-Lewis bout, to be decided at Colma, a short distance out of Frisco, Fitzgerald is the choice of the bettors at 10 to 5.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 12.—Young Corbett is a slight favorite over Aurelio Herrera in their ten-round battle here to-night. The odds are about 7 to 5, the usual interest is manifested in the outcome, for on it may depend the welterweight championship. Lewis is a strong candidate for the honors, for it is believed he will probably get on a match with the winner of the coming battle between Tom Sullivan and Joe Sims.

Fitzgerald and Lewis are both trained to the minute and each is brimful of confidence that victory will be his. There is considerable betting on the outcome, with Fitzgerald a slight favorite. Lewis has many supporters who are confident they will see him fight. Fitzgerald has been arranged for the club movement and the means of the club members will make the start very early to the ring.
